Local and General

The Editor arrived back in Crossfield on Friday morning last, after an absence of ten weeks, six of which he spent at his old home in Bolton, England, visiting relatives and old friends. The return voyage was a very rough one. Mrs. Whitfield, three daughters and Miss E. Dean accompanied him to Crossfield. A married daughter, her husband and son, and another daughter travelled as far as Montreal on their way to Hamilton where they intend to take up their abode.

Our substitute was so excited last week at the near return of the boys and the female members of the family, etc., that he must have been as you may say standing on his head. We notice he managed to print one page upside down. We hope none of our readers had to go through the same process to peruse it.

If a doctor makes a mistake he buries it, if a merchant makes a mistake he never tells it, but if an editor makes a mistake he prints it on a large sheet of paper for the world to look at and all the drunks in the district have something to wag their jaws about for nine days.

Don't forget the Joint Meeting of the United Farmers' of Alberta, to be held in the I.O.O.F. Hall, on Saturday, at 2 p.m.

Two or three able-bodied men are making enquiries for work around town. Anyone wanting help kindly enquire at the office of this paper.

See the FireCo Stove attachment at W. McRory and Sons.

There is an alteration in the local train service. On Sunday the south bound will leave at 14.40, and the north bound at 16.06. Please note.

Nourish kindly feelings, look on the bright side of things and the best side of people; think happy thoughts; smile whenever you can; speak gently; find pleasant things to say for they make the music of the world. These things are not written among the recipes for improving the complexion but they will help to make the face fair.

KYANIZE your home and so make it beautiful. Get it at McRory's.

The Sale of Horses belonging to G. Landymore, advertised to take place at the Stockyards, Crossfield, on Saturday, March 14th, has been withdrawn on account of the Meeting of the U.F.A., to be held on the same date in the I.O.O.F. Hall.

The Library Tea given by the Women's Institute, on Saturday last was a decided success in every way. The proceeds of the afternoon amounted to about $37.00, which the ladies intend to invest in books. Quite a number have already joined the Library and more are expected to do so.

Do not forget that the privilege of joining is open to all, and that membership cards may be obtained from Mrs. Stevens. Price to the Members of Institute 50c., non-members $1.00.

If you require to renew your old Loan or take out a new one, call and see me, as I can save you money. I represent the N. of Scotland Can. Mortgage Co., The Canada Life, and others.

THE COST OF LIVING

The Fiscal Policy has Little Effect—High Prices Universal To-day

It is frequently asserted in these days, when everybody is discussing the high cost of living, that the country's tariff policy accounts for a great part of the increase. Careful examination of the economic history of not only Canada and the United States, but also of European countries shows that rates of high prices have prevailed under low tariff and low prices under high tariff. Under certain conditions the tariff may be a factor in the cost of living, but as far as manufacturing products in Canada are concerned statistics do not support the contention that the products of tariff protected industries in Canada are increasing in price.

In 1878 one of Canada's pioneer carriage companies produced about 20 buggies, which they sold from $160 to $170 each. In 1911 their output was 15,000, and they were able to offer the farmer a buggy at $85 that was really superior to the one they used to receive $170 for. In 1878 the price of sugar was nine cents per pound retail. To-day it is six or seven cents. Binders in 1878 sold from $275 to $300, while to-day the farmer is able to get a better binder in every respect and that will do the same work for $125. Reapers that sold for $100 in 1878 are retelling to-day at $40 to $55. In view of these facts and numerous other examples that could be quoted, it seems evident that the cost of living has not increased very much by reason of the increased cost of manufactured goods.

Kleptomaniac

He Unintentionally Furnished
a Theme For a Story

By HELEN HUNTINGTON

Miss Maria Ashurst, an American girl, was shopping one day in an Oxford street store in London. While selecting gloves an old gentleman of aristocratic appearance stepped up to the other end of the counter and began fumbling with some pairs of gloves that lay thereon. Miss Ashurst noticed the old man watching the aristocratic appearance stepped up to the other end of the counter and began fumbling with some pairs of gloves that lay thereon. Miss Ashurst noticed the old man watching the aristocratic appearance stepped up to the other end of the counter and began fumbling with some pairs of gloves that lay thereon.

Now, while Miss Ashurst did not like to become an informer, yet, believing that the saleswoman would be charged for the missing gloves, she took it upon herself to call her attention to the theft, pointing to the old man's receding figure.

"Oh, that's only the Duke of Chipperton," said the saleswoman. "He's a kleptomaniac. His visits will be along in a few minutes and will settle for what he has taken."

She had hardly spoken the words before a trim, well-dressed man in a blue frock coat stepped up to the counter and said to the woman:

"Are you seeing in grace this morning?"

"It's shopping."

"Yes, the Duke was here a bit ago."

"Did he purchase anything?"

"Half a dozen pairs of gloves."

"Ow much?"

"One pound ten."

The lucky customer waited, took out the money and paid the bill, and half a crown besides.

"What's this for?" said the girl, presuming not to understand.

"A tip for you, miss."

"Aw! Thank you very much."

Then the valet went off after the Duke to make further purchases. In a few minutes Miss Ashurst was in London on her first visit, with letters of introduction that would admit her to society, and this was her first vision of any part of it.

Miss Ashurst had other views of British high life, for she became very popular in London society. She pos-been long in the house before she made up her mind that most if not all the guests were ignorant that the head of the house had a marvellous secret. Knowing this fact herself, she could see that a certain amount of unusual things must happen through the old gentleman's proclivity. The marquis seemed especially ill at ease, much so that it was questionable if he did not regret having departed from the family rule not to invite guests to the grange.

One morning Miss Ashurst on going to her room, before reaching it, saw the old Duke coming out. He was half blind and did not see her. Feeling sure that he had been giving way to his idiosyncrasy, as soon as she entered the chamber she looked about her to see if any articles were missing. Pulling open a drawer of the dresser where she had placed her jewels the night before, she saw that they were gone. Turning to a window, she discovered the Duke walking as fast as his old legs would carry him away from the house. Before she could get a good cup, she hurried downstairs and out the door in time to see his grace disappearing within a forest not far away. Following him, she came to the edge of a wood, finding something in the trunk of a hollow tree. As soon as he had gone Miss Ashurst went to the tree, thrust her arm into the aperture and pulled out a handful of jewels. But what made her gasp for breath was that they were not all that she needed, the bulk of them evidently belonged to other guests.

Miss Ashurst perceived at once that the situation was delicate. It was evident to her that the Duke's marquis, far from being satisfied to have his guests know his father's infirmity, would be dreadfully shocked at this case of wholesale robbery. What action should she take in the matter? She looked over the articles and thought she could name the owners of nearly all of them. She decided to take them back to the house and endeavor to replace them in the rooms from which they had been taken. But in doing this she must run the risk of being caught with the jewels in her possession and placed in the position of a thief.

One of the house party, the Lady Augusta Trimmingham, was evidently ambitious to be the Marchioness of Scarsdale, and the future Duchess of Chipperton. She had been told that all the jewels to the different rooms to which they belonged, except those belonging to Lady Augusta, without being detected. She was in Lady Augusta's room in the act of placing the articles in her jewel case when she should enter but their owner.

There was a triumphant look on the latter's face when she saw that one she had begun to fear as a rival was in her power. Maria Ashurst's heart sank within her, for she knew that without accusing the real thief she was disgraced. But what at the moment she feared most was that Lady Augusta would make the matter so public that the house would be obliged to make an investigation, which though it might exonerate her, would bring out the real culprit to their mortification.

Miss Ashurst left the room without expressing herself for being there, and Lady Augusta spoke no word, but she the former returned and said:

"If I consent to leave here at once will you promise to keep my being in your room over your jewel box a secret?"

"I will make no promise," was the cool reply.

Miss Ashurst straightway made her preparations to leave the grange, for she knew that her stay there after what had happened would be practically impossible. She told her hosts that news from America would necessitate her return to London before knowing her visit, and she departed by the next train. But before going she told the Duke that she had spread the story of her disgrace, for she found herself cut by most of the other guests. Had Lady Augusta Trimmingham never have known the sacrifice, the latter had made for him. He did not get the story from Lady Augusta, but he preferred to acquire credit for not mentioning it, but she told it for not mentioning it that it could not fail to reach him.

For the moment he was thunder-struck. Then he began to wonder what it meant. Miss Ashurst would have no interest in stealing a few jewels, for she was rich in her own right. Something must be back of it all. He must see her at once.

He went out that evening before called him to London, he took an afternoon train, promising to return the same night. Hearing the city, he arrived at once to Miss Ashurst's residence.

"What is the meaning of this affair?" he asked.

"What affair?"

"Your being in Lady Augusta Trimmingham's room over her jewel case."

"It means that I was there."

"For what purpose? You certainly did not intend to steal her jewels."

"Certainly I did not."

"As one who has been your host I have a right to an explanation."

"And I, who have been your guest, have a right to demand that if I give you an explanation you will believe me."

"Certainly I will believe you."

"Then Maria told the story of what she had seen of the Duke's marquis, his jewels and those of most of her other guests in the hollow tree. The marquis did not keep his promise to return that night, and the next morning telegraphed his mother that matters of importance would prevent his being at home for the rest of the term for which his guests had been invited. He hoped that she would be able to entertain them without his assistance."

The story of Maria Ashurst's disgrace was circulated in London society, but owing to the Marquis of Scarsdale's marked attention to her it did not gain much credence, and when his engagement with the American girl was announced, much to the astonishment of all who had been guests at the grange with his fiancée, the Duke of Chipperton was voted the inventor of a hoax."

PATHWAY TO DISASTER.

Overconfidence Has Been the Rule of Many a Good Man.

When the skillful general wishes to capture a fort he tries to find a place that the garrison, sure of its strength, has left unguarded. So Wolfe planned, and so Quebec fell.

Many of those idly dreaming of great swimmers, afraid of drowning in the water.

Many a trainer, before a great inter-collegiate match, has said that his team would surely win—if the coaches could cure the players of overconfidence. Overconfidence is the sure forerunner of disaster.

Every boy has seen some wretched drunkard, with his blue eyes and broken glass, his lips and chin shamefully and pitifully pleading for a few pennies with which to buy a drink. No one can look on that sight, common as it is, without a shudder. Yet there was a time when every such pitiful being was free from the desire for drink. For a time he took his place in moderation, and with a hidden inheritance from some ancestor, hitherto unsuspected, awoke in him and drove him headlong. No one knows whether that taint is hereditary, or whether, where men are saying, "Oh, I shall never be a drunkard! I can take care of myself!"

So it was that good swimmers thought as they swam to a point beyond their strength. So it was that the poor wretch thought in the days when he drank—before it was too late—YOUTH'S COMPANION.

Music and Melody.

"Music," says the author of "i Pagliacci," "is melody and melody alone. Compositions live and become immortal because of their melody, and they die for lack of it. The melody of Wagner and Strauss is obscured; but the obscuration is a defect and not a virtue. Verdi is great because of his melody, and all musical greatness is to be measured by its melody and by nothing else."

Pugilistic English.

The teacher was instructing the class in the rudiments of the English language.

"John," she said, "make a sentence using the word 'indispensible.'"

John, who was evidently of a pugilistic turn of mind, assumed an aggressive pose and announced:

"When you want to fight you stand in dis position."—YOUTH'S COMPANION.

A Man of Brains.

"I say, Reginald, I've forgotten my cardcase."

"Nerash mind, dear boy. I'll lend you some of mine."

But—ah—the names would be different, doucheknow."

"So they would! What a bend you have got, Alg?—London Opinion.

Scientific Discovery.

"You know, of course, that billions of people can gather on the sharp edge of a razor blade."

"I begin to understand," said young Mrs. Torkins. "The fire of stopping a razor is to subdue the people by corporal punishment."—Washington Star.

Must Be Attractive.

"They say she's pretty."

"Let me tell you, she's not. She gets on a street car and the advertising is a total loss."—Pittsburgh Post.

No marksmen ever holds a rifle "as solid as a rock." He may think he does, but Arms and the Man teaches that the best shot gives merely the "accusatory" laundress the trigger while the rifle is moving in the right direction—that is, when he takes the shot. The man who shoots with apparently by a sort of instinct, firing successfully at a running deer through the woods and over bushes around him, is a sure sign that of thrusting one's finger toward an indicated object—New York Times.

ENGLAND AND KING MENELIK.

British Government Watching Abyssinia—A Remarkable Career.

Since the death of Menelik England has been looking with anxious eyes upon the empire, for there is considerable disorder in that country. Territory amounting to 5,000 square miles was won by the king of the British Somaliland in 1897. All along the frontier bandit tribes have been collecting and threatening the central government. If, as the indications suggest, there is destined to be a series of wars to establish one of the main claimants to the throne, destitution among the Abyssinians will increase, and so will raids on British surrounding territory. Menelik had a great regard as well as a wholesome fear of the British Government.

With little authentic known about the Emperor Menelik, he did enough in his own obscure corner of the world to establish the reputation of being one of the most remarkable men whom the negro race has produced in recent years. The descendant, as he boasted, of the Queen of Sheba, he ascended the throne of Ethiopia he had to face a country riven among a score of petty states, and he had to introduce the rudiments of civilization.

This he accomplished by calling to his aid the science and arts of Europe. He crushed the minor chiefs of his own empire and abolished slavery. He fostered the means of communication and encouraged agriculture. He even built railroads and encouraged his people to trade with the outside world.

Assisted in by Gerce Mohammedans, Abyssinia remained unknown to Europe a thousand years. Still shut off from the world by Italian Eritrea and British and French Somaliland, it was a hermit kingdom where almost anything may happen.

Scotchman Got the Best of Them.

Jack B., who paints portraits and, incidentally, the portraits of William Byatt's, the Irish poet, is a regular patron of a certain New York City restaurant. The habitués of this place he has acquired a reputation as a raconteur.

"In my part of Ireland," he tells, "there was a noisy Scotchman whose abuse of everything Irish led the neighbors considerably. At first, however, he refrained from bragging about Scotland, and we decided to wait until he should be guilty of that indiscretion before acting drastically. The chance came at last. He had been swearing at the Irish post free, the Irish and the Irish song, and ended up by saying that, 'Ho, mon, Scotland was verra decent!' It was all done with milk and honey."

"Well, we went for him, Scotland, we pointed out, was known to be a barren waste inhabited by starvelings. The biblical quotation he had used could not have been more outrageously misapplied."

"He looked us over with his canny eye. 'Ye're right,' he said, and he can prove it. Scotland flowed with milk, and maybe honey, all the time I was in the world when I was ten months old.'"

Breakfast Before Bed.

The latest freak of London's night life is the evolution of the breakfast brigade, whose motto is to breakfast before bed.

When the last night club closes at five o'clock in the morning, instead of going home, the latest craze, now is for the light-headed brigade to charge on the nearest restaurant and eat a cold-gray-dawn breakfast, sometimes visiting two or three places before the streets begin filling with the crowds going to work. As one newspaper has paraphrased Tennyson, it is "theirs not to reason why, theirs but to drink or die."

Several west end restaurants report that they have never known such an insistent demand for bacon and eggs and the ordinary working hours of many restaurants are now being rearranged to supply the early morning rush of the merry night hawks.

Lord Couldn't Be Done.

Lord Sheffield was once walking down Piccadilly with a friend, to whom he explained that it was impossible for anyone to pick a pocket without his knowledge. Lord Sheffield's pocket-handkerchief was hanging from his friend, having diverted his attention, quietly abstracted it. Instantly Lord Sheffield collapsed, and the man who was passing and charged him with the theft; but, the friend producing the handkerchief and explaining the joke, the unfortunate individual whom his lordship had so unceremoniously rebuffed, and who afterwards Lord Sheffield discovered that he had lost his pocketbook!

BACHELOR NOW RULES

COL. CARLETON IS NEW COMMANDANT OF R. M. C.

There Will Be No Hostess in Quarters at Kingston's Military School as a Result of the Choice Which the Militia Department Has Made—Col. Carleton Has Thirty-Two Years Experience.

The Royal Military College at Kingston is now notified over by a bachelor commandant in the person of Col. L. R. Carleton of the Essex Regiment. The heretofore Minister of Militia purposely chose a man of the kitchen type to rule at Point Frederick is being debated. However, the fact remains that, with the return to England of Col. Wood, the acting commandant, and his family, there is no hostess in quarters at the Royal Military College. Col. Carleton is a member of a distinguished British military family, being a descendant of Sir Guy Carleton, who was responsible for the passing of the Quebec act in 1774, when military government of Canada. His father was the late Col. G. Carleton of the Royal Artillery. The new commandant has been in the line of years of military life. He has served in India and South Africa, having held a staff position when the British fought the Boers. Col. Carleton is most congenial and distinguished-looking. He is about six feet in height.

Incubators In Egypt.

The announcement made by Mr. W. H. Cadman that he has discovered how the ancient Egyptians incubated their eggs, has caused a great deal of interest. The number of eggs incubated in Egypt 5,000 years ago. The secret has been guarded, but it is laid bare at last. They had no oil stoves or gas or electric heated incubators, but they had ovens which worked much better, even though they required more constant tending. Each oven was calculated to hold 7,000 eggs, and the fuel by which it was heated consisted of chopped straw and dung, but for the last ten days of the hatching the energy was supplied altogether by the chickens themselves. It is the convenience of those operating our modern incubators to use too much heat, especially towards the end of the period, and now we may learn from the old Egyptians how not to do things as well as how to do them.

The use of the straw and other light fuel shows that the Egyptians were very careful to avoid the intense heat at any stage. We thought that we were the first in the world to hatch chickens and other poultry in incubators, but we are only about fifty centuries behind the times.

Ridicules Ulster Army.

So much talk has come out of Ireland about the Ulster movement and the determination to adopt desperate measures for armed resistance against home rule? that the experience of a former sergeant of the Royal Artillery, who offered his services as drill instructor to the Ulster volunteers, is of interest.

The officer returned to London disgusted and full of ridicule. He says he found absolutely no excitement in Belfast and went to Bangor, where, he says, "I saw about sixty men on parade, the whole of them of no use to anybody." Some of these extraordinary weapons had wooden stocks, iron barrels and the trigger guards, while others were all stock, barrel, trigger guard and everything.

The men were about as well drilled as the average schoolboy and knew nothing of extended or company formations. I saw fifty members of a ladies' ambulance corps give a much smarter drill than the men.

THE WINDOW AT THE WHITE CAT

By Mary Roberts Rinehart

The car went to the bad again at Wynlon and he and Barney tinkered with it until 2:40. They got it in shape to go back to the barn, but that was all. Just as they were ready to start a passenger got in a woman and alone—a small woman with a brown veil. She wore a black dress or a suit—he was vain about a thing but the color, and he noticed her especially because she was fifty and excited. Half a block further a man boarded the car and sat across from the woman. But she looked away, and then, No, he had not heard what he said.

The man got out when the car went into the barn, but the woman stayed on. And he and Barney got another car and took it out, and the woman went with them. She made a complete round trip this time, going out to Wynlon and back to the end of the line down town. It was by daylight when she got out at last, at First and Day streets.

Asked if he had thought at the time that the veiled woman was young or old, he said he had thought, she was probably middle aged. Very young or very old woman would not put in the night riding in a street car. Yes, he had had men who rode around couples of times at night, mostly to sober up before they went home. But he never saw a woman do it before.

On the night of the previous Thursday the chauffeur had been engaged to take a sick woman to a downtown hotel to a house at Bellwood. The woman's husband was with her, and they went away to avoid jolting. It was after 12 when he drove away from the house and started home. At a corner he did not know the names of the streets—a woman hailed the cab and asked him if he belonged in Bellwood or was going to the city. She had missed the last train. When he told her he was going into town, she promptly engaged him and showed him where to wait for her, a narrow road off the main street.

I waited an hour, he finished, before she came. I dropped to sleep or I would have seen her without her. After half past one she came along, and she gentleman with her. He put her in the cab, and I took her to the city. When I saw in the paper that a lady had disappeared from Bellwood that night, I knew right off that it was my party.

"Now you know the man again?" I would know his voice, I expect, or I could not see much. He wore a black suit and had a travelling bag of some kind.

What did he say to the woman? I asked.

He didn't say much. Before he closed the door, he said: You have got to be a terrible person, or something like that. I thought that was all. From that travelling bag and I thought perhaps it was an eloquent, and the lady had decided to throw him down.

Was it a young woman or an old one, I asked again. This time the cabby took the answer.

Young, he asserted, slim and quick, dressed in black, with a black veil. Soft voice. She got out at a Market square, and I have an idea she took a coastway car there.

Hardly think it was Miss Maitland, I said. She was past sixty and besides, I don't think she had that way. Still, it is worth following up.

He fumbled in his pocket and after a minute brought up a small black pocketbook and held it out to me. It was the small coin purse out of a leather handbag.

She dropped this in the cab, sir, he said. I took it home to the museum—not knowing what else to do with it and it contained only that bit of paper, was the small coin purse out of a small white card without an engraving and the name of a woman in a pencil figure, "C. 1122."

When the cuman had gone I sat down to write the little story. The two stories the taxi-driver was the more probable, as far as Miss Jane was concerned. Knowing her childlike manner, her timidity, her shrinking and shamefaced fear of the dark, it was almost incredible that she should walk the three miles to Wynlon voluntarily and from there lose herself in the city.

Such an explanation would not fit the blood stains or the fact that she had gone, as far as we could find out, in her night clothes.

Still, she had left the village that night, either by cab or on foot. If the driver had been correct in his time, however, the taxi-driver was almost eliminated. He said the woman got into the cab at 1:30. It was between 1:30 and 1:45 when Margery heard the footsteps in the attic.

I think for the first time it came to me, that day, that there was at least a possibility that Miss Jane had not been attacked, robbed, and killed, that she had left home voluntarily, under stress of great excitement. But if she had, why?

If I was not proud of the part I played. So far I had blundered, it seemed to me, at every point where a blunder was possible. I had been a half hour too late to save Allan Fleming.

He had been up and awake, and Miss Jane had got out of the house under my very nose. Last night, by no means least, I had waited three days to find the right woman, and when I found her some one else did for her. I was in the depths that day when Burton came in.

He walked into the office jauntily and put something on the desk in front of me. It was a Russian leather bag.

The leather bag, he pointed proudly. It was found in Boston.

It was not locked, and I got it open in a minute. As I had expected, it was empty.

Perhaps Wardrop was telling the truth, I exclaimed. If Jove Burton, he was robbed by the woman in the cab and he can't tell about her on account of Miss Fleming.

She made a haul, for certain. I told him then of the two women who had left Bellwood on the night of Miss Jane's disappearance and showed him the purse and its inclosure. The C. 1122 which he said it had.

It might be anything, he said as he gave it back, from a '100, chapter and verse in the Bible to a prescription for rheumatism at a drug store.

As to the lady in the cab, I think perhaps you are right, he said, examining the interior of the bag, where Wardrop's name in ink told his story.

How on earth did you get the bag? I asked.

It was a coincidence. There have been a shower of baggage thieves in two or three car-carn cities lately, mostly Boston. The method, the police say, was something like this:—One of them, the chief of the gang, would get a wagon, drive like an expressman, and no round the depot looking at baggage. He would make a mental note of the numbers, go away and forge a check to make and secure the pieces he had taken a fancy to. Then he merely drove around to head quarters and the trunk was rifled. The police got on, raided the place and found, among others, our Russian leather bag.

Wellwood? Then how— I came while I was lurching with Miss Letitia, he said easily. We are very chummy—Miss Letitia and I. I want to know to—disregarding my antipathism—where is the hundred thousand?

Find the woman. Did you ever lose of Anderson, the horse proprietor? he asked, without apparent relevancy.

I have been thinking of him, I answered. If we could get Wardrop here on some plausible excuse it would take Anderson about ten miles.

WHY KEEP ON COUGHING?

Here is a Remedy That Will Stop It

Do you realize the danger in a neglected cough? Does your cough get rid of it? Yes, you can shake it off, even though it has stuck to you for a long time, if you do it right.

Keep out in the fresh air as much as possible. Strengthen your system with plenty of wholesome food, and take No-Dro-Cough Syrup of Listerine, Licorice and Chloroform.

This reliable household remedy has broken up thousands of hacking, persistent coughs, which were just as troublesome as yours, and what it has done for so many others it will do for you.

No-Dro-Cough Syrup of Listerine, Licorice and Chloroform contains absolutely no harmful drugs, and so can be given safely to children, as well as adults. Your physician or druggist can confirm this statement, for we are ready to send you on request a complete list of all the ingredients.

use, with his instruments and experimental psychology, to know every thing Wardrop ever forgot.

I'll get you out of this, Burton said, preparing to leave. I'll promise to get Wardrop and have him on the spot.

About 4 o'clock a woman came who refused to be turned away. She was not a doctor, but a dignified and fairly handsome. My first impression was fair value. She moved away with a dignified and she was not laced, cramped or made up.

The lady who came to the theatre says that the respectable woman nowadays out of respect, outstern and outstern the unrespectable. However, the illusion was gone the moment she began to speak.

She was a woman, she said, in her own right. She threw it like a weapon. I am perfectly honest in saying that for a woman of her class and her voice outweighed the remarkable thing she was saying.

THE WAY OUT

From Weakness to Power by Food

Getting the right start for the day's work often makes the difference between doing things in wholesome comfort, or dragging along half dead all day.

There's more in the use of proper food than many people ever dream of—more's the pity.

"Three years ago I began working in a general store," writes a man, "and between frequent deliveries and frequent customers, I was kept on my feet from morning till night."

"Indication had troubled me for some time and in fact my slightest breakfast was taken more from habit than appetite."

"I was in the habit of eating a light diet as I was not noticed much, but at work it made my neck and hungry long before noon."

"Yet a breakfast of rolls, fried foods and coffee meant headache, nausea and a great deal of trouble. Either way I was losing weight and strength, when one day a friend suggested that I try a 'Grape-Nuts' breakfast."

"So I began with some stewed fruit, Grape-Nuts and cream, a soft boiled egg, toast, and a cup of Postum. By noon I was hungry but with a healthy, normal appetite."

"The next, languid feeling was not there."

"My head was clearer, nerves steadier, and I was able to do my work. I feel strong, my appetite normal, my bodily power splendid and head wonderfully clear."

Physical Examination for Children

Upon the recommendation of an special commission in New York State, the legislature has enacted that, before a workman is employed, a physical examination of every child shall be made by a medical officer of the Department of Health and that a duplicate record of the results of such physical examination shall be transmitted to the Department of Labor. During six months, this law, in New York City alone, prevented 15,000 physically unfit children from going to work in factories.

It would be well also that the definition of labor be amplified, as brain work is more exacting up, the physical strength than muscular work, and under present conditions the environment during working hours of the average skilled mechanic is infinitely more sanitary than are most of our offices and stores.

The principal grocer of a small country town was chatting with several customers when a discussion arose as to the wonderful sense of touch of the blind.

Here comes old blind Henry Peterson now, said the grocer. He'll tell him.

He took a spoonful of sugar and handed it to the grocer. He said, "Feel this, Henry," he said, and tell me what it is."

The grocer took up his hand in the scoop, passed it content through his fingers and said in a firm, confident tone: "That's sugar."

Internal parasites in the shape of worms may retard the growth of children and their vitality and retard physical development. They keep the child from growing and prevent him from attending to, change life. The child can be spared much suffering and the mother much anxiety by the use of Miller's Worm Powders, which are sure death to worms in any shape.

Then this, asked the rejected suit, or about the matter of the suit.

Quite, was the reply. Shall I return your letters?

Yes, please, answered the young man. There's some very good material in them I can use again!

DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS MAKE WOMEN WELL

Just because she is a woman, there are times when every woman needs help and strength in the form of a blood-building tonic. To thousands of girls and women Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have proved a blessing, because they enrich the blood, give strength and restore tone to the aching nerves. The anemic girl who is languid and pale, the wife whose back feels like breaking, the mother whose health falls as she reaches middle age—for all such sufferers, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are invaluable, because ill health in woman is usually caused by poor blood or insufficient blood, and the pills have cured thousands of others, who say: "Mrs. L. Morine, Walbrook, N. S., says:—It is impossible for me to say too much in praise of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I have been a great sufferer from those troubles that make the life of so many women an almost constant misery. Pains in the back and side racked me, tortured me. My nerves seemed to give out, and at times I could do no house work, and only women who have similarly suffered know what I endured. I tried medicine after medicine without any benefit, and was finally persuaded to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Soon after starting the pills I found an improvement, and I continued their use my health and strength returned and I now feel as well as ever I did in my life, and I am certain my experience merely in the hope that it may lead some other suffering woman to renewed health. I may add that my mother suffered from rheumatism, so badly that she had to use a crutch and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills completely restored her to her usual good health."

Always get the genuine pills with the full name "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," on the wrapper around each box. If your dealer does not keep them, the pills will be sent post paid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

And did you ever seek the man, we asked the Office.
Once or twice, replied the Office. But I found him waiting outside, my door.

Pills of Attacked Value.—Purmelee's Vegetable Pills are the result of careful study of the properties of certain roots and herbs, and the action of such as sedatives and laxatives on the digestive apparatus. The success of the compound have met with attests the value of their work. These pills have been recognized for many years as the best cleansers of the system that can be got. Their excellence was recognized from the first and they grow more popular daily.

Nick's Disguises
Small Boy—Mamma, is it really true that the devil has horns and a club foot?
Mother—Ah, my dear, sometimes the devil appears in the shape of a very handsome and charming young man.
Boy—(pityingly)—Oh, mamma! You're thinking of Cupid.

Staying With Them
Some of your constituents are disagreeing with you, said the trusted lieutenant.

Well, keep tab on them, replied Senator Forghum; when enough disagree with me to constitute a reliable majority, I am going to turn around and agree with them.

The boy at the head of the class will state what were the dark ages of the world.

Boy hesitates.
Next, Master Jones, can you tell me what the dark ages were lovely?

I guess they were the ages before spectators were invented.

What do we know of the value of meat as a food? asked the professor. Its value is high, measured by price standards, replied the bright pupil.

She came into the telephone office and rapped on the counter. The clerk remembered that she had been there about ten minutes before as she came forward to meet her. He wondered what she wanted this time.

Oh, she said, let me have that telegram I wrote just now. I forgot some thing very important. I wanted to underscore "perfectly lovely" in acknowledging the receipt of that bracelet. Will it cost anything extra?

No, ma'am, said the accommodating clerk, as he handed her the message.

The young woman drew two heavy lines beneath the words and said: It is awfully good of you to let me do that. It will please Arthur ever so much.

Don't mention it, said the clerk. If you would like it, I will put a few drops of violet extract on the telegram at the same rates.

Oh, thank you, sir! You don't know how much I would appreciate it. I am going to send all my telegrams through this office. You are so obliging.

And the smile she gave him would have done any one good, with the possible exception of Arthur.

FROM GREAT LAKES TO THE ROCKIES

WOMEN SING THE PRAISES OF DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

Saskatchewan Lady Adds Her Testimony to What Has Already Been said of the Great Work Dodd's Kidney Pills are Doing.

Caenerville, Sask. (Special).—The scarcity of female help in a new country subjects the women of the prairie to unusual strain, and careful observation has established the fact that this strain first makes itself felt in the kidneys. For this reason Dodd's Kidney Pills are making an enviable reputation from the Great Lakes, to the foot-hills of the Rockies.

Everywhere you will find women singing the praises of the great Canadian kidney remedy that has banished their pains and weariness, and brought them back to health. Among the many is Mrs. Edgar Cowen, an estimable lady of this place.

"I have found Dodd's Kidney Pills very beneficial," Mrs. Cowen states. "If anything I can say will help any sufferer I am glad to add my testimony to what has already been said."

The kidneys strain all the refuse material out of the blood. If they are out of order this refuse remains in the blood, and becomes poison. That's why sound kidneys mean pure blood and good health. Dodd's Kidney Pills make sound kidneys.

First Lady—Too bad! Mrs. S. always has such agreeable weather for her afternoon teas.
Second Lady—Yes; she never pours but it rains.

Minard's Liniment Cures Garget in Cows
A young mother, who had just returned from India, engaged a new nurse for her baby. The nurse came to her and said:

"I don't know what's the matter, madam, but the little one cries and cries. I can do nothing to quieten it."

The mother thought a moment; then brightening up, she said: "I remember now. Baby's last nurse was a black one. You will find the stone polish on the third shelf in the kitchen."

Mr. Bunbury—If that young man's coming here to see you every day in the week you had better give him a hint to come after supper.
Miss Bunbury—Don't think it's necessary, as that's what the comest after.

The Melting Pot
Westerner (on board steamer bound for America)—It's going to be pretty fine to get back again. Didn't you get awfully homesick in Europe among so many strange faces and languages?
Easterner—None, not at all; felt right at home.
Westerner—Why, how could you? Easterner—Dead easy. You see, I live in New York.

Experienced mothers say Zam-Buk is best for children's injuries and skin troubles, because:

It is herbal—no poisonous mineral coloring.

It is antiseptic—prevents cuts and burns taking the wrong way.

It is soothing—ends pain quickly.

It heals every time.

Just as good for grown-ups.

Sold at all stores and druggists.

Coconut Growing in Queensland
Latest reports from North Queensland state that the cultivation of coconuts is increasing fast, especially in the vicinity of Cape York, Mossman, and between Mourilyan and Cardwell.

Good markets for the whole husked nut are being obtained at present, but when it made into copra the present price would make this a remunerative industry. It is understood that $130 a ton is being offered in the markets for Queensland grown copra.

A Beer Lottery
William Banks, landlord of the Crater Arms public house, Preston, England, was fined £12 and costs for a curious lottery game. The police found several pint pots of beer on the counter. Some had three-penny pieces in the liquor.

When the Son Set
There was a little boy who commenced to cry. Got up this morning at 7 o'clock, was his first cry.

Such an expression, said his horrified mother. Does the sun get up? No, it rises.

Just before Tommy retired he wrote in his diary: "Set at 9 o'clock."

Father's 'ay
The new year was making pastoral calls in his parish and stopped to converse with a small boy at the garden gate.

And where does your father go on Sundays, my little man?
Well, on fine Sundays he goes golfing and on wet Sundays he turns us all out of the house to go to church, that he can have a bit of peace.

Want of Thought.

It is a trite, homely adage that says, "more wrong is wrought by want of thought," etc. Certain it is that the mass of suffering and tragedies of the world are the direct result of indolence and thoughtlessness. The old parable of the thoughtless grasshopper who sang all summer and starved when the season of death came, is verified daily. Too many young people fail to take an earnest view of life, and too many suffer for their thoughtlessness. In this land, where fortunes are piled up from poverty, there is too often a tendency toward the belief that this is luck, rather than the result of toil and industry, and, above all, a peculiar genius for money-making that a few possess.

The boy, therefore, imagines it will do no harm if he idles for a while. When he is ready to settle down he can easily acquire wealth by a peculiar sharpness that quite likely he does not possess. He forgets or fails to comprehend that even if he is possessed of financial genius it must also be united with prudence and a moderate amount of industry to achieve a career. A great many boys and girls fail to make themselves valuable to their employer because their aim is not to do their work well, but simply to earn wages. They are ever eager to be through and slow to begin.

Such workmen never rise beyond mediocrity. Boys in this country are too often outstripped by foreigners in the shops and trades because they lack systematic business habits. They have not been trained to their work as the foreign youth has been, under the sternest of masters—necessity.

Dominion Department of Agriculture. DAIRY BRANCH.

Within the next few weeks several hundred cheese factories will be opening, hundreds of farmers will be preparing to milk thousands of freshly calved cows. Logically this beginning of a new season is the time to commence keeping records of production of the cows separately. Just a knowledge of the total yield of milk from the whole herd may give the owner an idea of the average yield per cow, but that does not give quite enough information. There may be a thousand pounds of milk difference in the total yield of two cows for the season, which would be unnoticeable in the difference in the appearance of their two milk pails daily. Often the difference is far more than a thousand pounds, yet all cows are lumped together, good, poor and medium, all alike, when taking merely an average.

Since keeping records of individual production many a dairyman has increased the average of his herd by fifteen hundred, and two thousand pounds of milk or more, because he has been able to detect the poor, unprofitable cows that masquerade as real dairy cows. On application to the Dairy Division, Ottawa, milk record forms and instructions are supplied free. Write to-day, and begin the new season right, with the object of keeping none but profitable cows.
